Methods of fitting series of B-spline functions to a set of points (such as those on a smooth curve) are derived. A measure of distortion of the input curve to the spline functions and a measure of the distance between the input and output shapes are presented. Distortion is analyzed for the case of the simplest possible curve, a circle. Comparisons with previous results for the circle are made and the results extended to the problem of fitting a linear ribbon to a set of points.Long-Term Economic Costs Associated with Implementation and Evaluation of a Pathway for Transdiagnostic Treatment of Anxiety and Depression in Primary Care. Transdiagnostic treatments (TDTs) for anxiety and depression are efficacious but underutilized in primary care (PC). This study evaluates the economic impact of a 12-week, low-intensity, primary care-based TDT pathway in a real-world setting. Generalized Linear Mixed-Effects Models were used to compare total PC billings, in-office visits, and out-of-pocket costs (OPCs) before and after implementation of TDTs within a TDT cohort and benchmark changes in PC visits in a control cohort. The TDT cohort had 47.0% more encounters than the control group (p
